You have the option to sign in using a Login.gov, ID.me, or Social Security Username account to access Social Security's online services. If you don't have an account, you can create one with Login.gov or ID.me now. Login.gov Login.gov is a U.S government sign-in service that provides a simple, secure, and private way for the public to access government websites. You can use your Login.gov account to access your Social Security benefits, services, and information in a single, secure account. You can also use your Login.gov account to manage other government benefits and services. ID.me ID.me is a single sign-on provider that meets the U.S. government's online identity proofing and authentication requirements. Please consider using ID.me if you live outside the United States. Please note that you do NOT need to create a new ID.me account specifically for Social Security purposes. You can use one ID.me account to access both government and business services. Social Security Username This applies if you created an account with Social Security prior to September 18, 2021, and sign in with a username versus your email address. Note: These accounts will be retired soon. If you sign in with your username, you will be prompted to transition your account to Login.gov. We encourage you to make this transition before your Social Security username account is retired. If you already have a Login.gov or ID.me account, you may use your existing account to access Social Security services. JavaScript is required to use this service Social Security's online services are designed to be accessible and user-friendly. That is why we require all web browsers to have JavaScript enabled when working with our online services. To use this service, please adjust your web browser settings to enable JavaScript, then try again. If you can't or don't want to enable JavaScript, you can return to the Social Security home page.
