Meanwhile, if we take a closer look at a red nose and perceive it, we notice how much its memory-image differs from the original perception. For instance, how can we obtain knowledge about how unlike our memories are to actual experiences? Furthermore, let's consider an inhabitant of a remote region who has read and considered the precepts of the gospel and the example of our Saviour. He would not expect to find benevolence in a court of inquisition or mercy among those who engage in massacres. Instead, he would look for these qualities among those who practice kindness and compassion. As an example, if we were to draw a Polygon with many sides, it would closely resemble a Circle, making it difficult to distinguish between the two. When a tragic incident occurs within a family, such as a brother killing his sibling or a son intending to kill his father, these are the situations that poets should focus on.
